The Summit should work to provide the necessary fiscal, judicial and policy space needed to ensure a decolonial, feminist and just transition for people and planet. This means promoting a re-balancing of the global economy with more vibrant, inclusive and circular economic systems, that could foster systemic reforms while promoting human rights, gender equality, social equity and environmental justice. Some institutions have spoken of such a new global consensus in terms of “Green New Deal” which can be reflected on in such a Summit. Most recently, the UN Secretary-General noted at his Nelson Mandela lecture that “we need a New Global Deal to ensure that power, wealth and opportunities are shared more broadly and fairly at the international level.” This Summit would provide the space for such a multilateral conversation and corresponding decisions to be taken. This would also allow for outcomes of all 6 Discussion Groups to have an input towards a broader systemic framework. This is the time for the UN to promote a new global transformation based on the human rights framework, as it did 75 years ago.

Global Technology Assessment Mechanism at the UN

The proposal is to create a solidarity-based Global Financing Mechanism for Social Protection to support countries design, implement and take precautionary measures.

International Economic Reconstruction and Systemic Reforms Summit at the UN

• The Summit should work to provide the necessary fiscal, judicial and policy space needed to ensure a decolonial, feminist and just transition for people and planet. This means promoting a re-balancing of the global economy with more vibrant, inclusive and circular economic systems, that could foster systemic reforms while promoting human rights, gender equality, social equity and environmental justice. Some institutions have spoken of such a new global consensus in terms of “Green New Deal” which can be reflected on in such a Summit. Most recently, the UN Secretary-General noted at his Nelson Mandela lecture that “we need a New Global Deal to ensure that power, wealth and opportunities are shared more broadly and fairly at the international level.” This Summit would provide the space for such a multilateral conversation and corresponding decisions to be taken. This would also allow for outcomes of all 6 Discussion Groups to have an input towards a broader systemic framework. This is the time for the UN to promote a new global transformation based on the human rights framework, as it did 75 years ago.

Global Financing Mechanism for Social Protection

The proposal is to create a solidarity-based Global Financing Mechanism for Social Protection to support countries design, implement and take precautionary measures.

International Economic Reconstruction and Systemic Reforms Summit at the UN

• The Summit should work to provide the necessary fiscal, judicial and policy space needed to ensure a decolonial, feminist and just transition for people and planet. This means promoting a re-balancing of the global economy with more vibrant, inclusive and circular economic systems, that could foster systemic reforms while promoting human rights, gender equality, social equity and environmental justice. Some institutions have spoken of such a new global consensus in terms of “Green New Deal” which can be reflected on in such a Summit. Most recently, the UN Secretary-General noted at his Nelson Mandela lecture that “we need a New Global Deal to ensure that power, wealth and opportunities are shared more broadly and fairly at the international level.” This Summit would provide the space for such a multilateral conversation and corresponding decisions to be taken. This would also allow for outcomes of all 6 Discussion Groups to have an input towards a broader systemic framework. This is the time for the UN to promote a new global transformation based on the human rights framework, as it did 75 years ago.

Global Technology Assessment Mechanism at the UN

The proposal is to create a solidarity-based Global Financing Mechanism for Social Protection to support countries design, implement and take precautionary measures.

International Economic Reconstruction and Systemic Reforms Summit at the UN

• The Summit should work to provide the necessary fiscal, judicial and policy space needed to ensure a decolonial, feminist and just transition for people and planet. This means promoting a re-balancing of the global economy with more vibrant, inclusive and circular economic systems, that could foster systemic reforms while promoting human rights, gender equality, social equity and environmental justice. Some institutions have spoken of such a new global consensus in terms of “Green New Deal” which can be reflected on in such a Summit. Most recently, the UN Secretary-General noted at his Nelson Mandela lecture that “we need a New Global Deal to ensure that power, wealth and opportunities are shared more broadly and fairly at the international level.” This Summit would provide the space for such a multilateral conversation and corresponding decisions to be taken. This would also allow for outcomes of all 6 Discussion Groups to have an input towards a broader systemic framework. This is the time for the UN to promote a new global transformation based on the human rights framework, as it did 75 years ago.

Global Technology Assessment Mechanism at the UN

The proposal is to create a solidarity-based Global Financing Mechanism for Social Protection to support countries design, implement and take precautionary measures.

International Economic Reconstruction and Systemic Reforms Summit at the UN

• The Summit should work to provide the necessary fiscal, judicial and policy space needed to ensure a decolonial, feminist and just transition for people and planet. This means promoting a re-balancing of the global economy with more vibrant, inclusive and circular economic systems, that could foster systemic reforms while promoting human rights, gender equality, social equity and environmental justice. Some institutions have spoken of such a new global consensus in terms of “Green New Deal” which can be reflected on in such a Summit. Most recently, the UN Secretary-General noted at his Nelson Mandela lecture that “we need a New Global Deal to ensure that power, wealth and opportunities are shared more broadly and fairly at the international level.” This Summit would provide the space for such a multilateral conversation and corresponding decisions to be taken. This would also allow for outcomes of all 6 Discussion Groups to have an input towards a broader systemic framework. This is the time for the UN to promote a new global transformation based on the human rights framework, as it did 75 years ago.

Global Technology Assessment Mechanism at the UN

The proposal is to create a solidarity-based Global Financing Mechanism for Social Protection to support countries design, implement and take precautionary measures.

International Economic Reconstruction and Systemic Reforms Summit at the UN

• The Summit should work to provide the necessary fiscal, judicial and policy space needed to ensure a decolonial, feminist and just transition for people and planet. This means promoting a re-balancing of the global economy with more vibrant, inclusive and circular economic systems, that could foster systemic reforms while promoting human rights, gender equality, social equity and environmental justice. Some institutions have spoken of such a new global consensus in terms of “Green New Deal” which can be reflected on in such a Summit. Most recently, the UN Secretary-General noted at his Nelson Mandela lecture that “we need a New Global Deal to ensure that power, wealth and opportunities are shared more broadly and fairly at the international level.” This Summit would provide the space for such a multilateral conversation and corresponding decisions to be taken. This would also allow for outcomes of all 6 Discussion Groups to have an input towards a broader systemic framework. This is the time for the UN to promote a new global transformation based on the human rights framework, as it did 75 years ago.

Global Technology Assessment Mechanism at the UN

The proposal is to create a solidarity-based Global Financing Mechanism for Social Protection to support countries design, implement and take precautionary measures.

International Economic Reconstruction and Systemic Reforms Summit at the UN

• The Summit should work to provide the necessary fiscal, judicial and policy space needed to ensure a decolonial, feminist and just transition for people and planet. This means promoting a re-balancing of the global economy with more vibrant, inclusive and circular economic systems, that could foster systemic reforms while promoting human rights, gender equality, social equity and environmental justice. Some institutions have spoken of such a new global consensus in terms of “Green New Deal” which can be reflected on in such a Summit. Most recently, the UN Secretary-General noted at his Nelson Mandela lecture that “we need a New Global Deal to ensure that power, wealth and opportunities are shared more broadly and fairly at the international level.” This Summit would provide the space for such a multilateral conversation and corresponding decisions to be taken. This would also allow for outcomes of all 6 Discussion Groups to have an input towards a broader systemic framework. This is the time for the UN to promote a new global transformation based on the human rights framework, as it did 75 years ago.